Winter here in Wyoming looks like a fictional place, an elaborate simplicity. Wind howls all night and day pushing litters of storm fronts from Beartooth to Big Horn mountains. And when it lets up, the mountains disappear. The hayfield that runs east from my house ends in a curl of clouds that have fallen like sails luffing from sky to ground. Snow returns across the field to me, and the cows, dusted with white, look like snowcapped continents drifting.	False	By Gretel Ehrlich	1981-12-31	TX 820944
